| Shaun's advices and remarks               | Summer wise - used as alternative hook baits (something different over the main bait). It is also a great summer bait in its own right for those quick sessions when you don't have time to establish a bait.             | Any country, any time of the year so long as you can get a bait in the water. One of the two first choices I would take anywhere.  | Any country, any time of the year so long as you can get a bait in the water. One of the two first choices I would take anywhere.  | Special Crab really comes into its own during the warmer summer months when the Garlic, caviar, crab, salmon and black pepper start to work their magic properly.  | I wanted a fish based bait that was bright in colour and safe to use in the winter too. No bulk oils at all to hinder digestion.  | Similar base to Fruity Trifle but developed to put Poisson Chat off. This works at all times of the year but we must point out the pineapple is only there to hide the ingredient that the poisson Chat don't like.  | This is another 12 months of the year bait that you don't need to introduce lots to get the fish interested, they appear to accept it as a food source right from day one.   | Another any time any place bait which is also quite soft, great for crumbling up between your fingers, The colour helps blend it in on sandy and gravel type lake beds. This can be a huge benefit with wary fish.  | One of our long standing field testers Ron Key loves this bait. We struggle to get him to try anything else.  | Dull in colour so as to not attract the attentions of water birds or spook wary fish. It is made to be as natural looking and tasting as possible.  |
|   | One of the most successful winter baits I've ever used. It is rare you will find me on the bank in the winter without this on at least one rod.   | I had to force myself to stop using this as I was aware I was hardly promoting any other bait in the range. It has now become one of my main fall back baits. If I go through a lean spell, then the Magnum comes out again.   | Rahja Spice has sat in the top two selling baits for the past 12 years! The only way you get consistent big sellers is customers having consistent success. Every bait company has an absolute classic. This is ours. Barbel and chub love it too.                     | This one is a very well tried and tested bait having caught so many fish before Quest Baits as it is known was even born. It had to be included in our range on day one and still sits there having been responsible for so many personal bests for our customers.   | Quick flavour release ideal for quick short sessions where maximum attraction can help. There is also he added bonus that barbel love it too.   | Another one that works great as an alternative hook bait or one to mix in with other baits to add a contrast of colour that the carp always find irresistible. It is yellow as you may have guessed for a pineapple bait. The colour nature intended for it. | Questrami is softer than our other baits and soaks up added glugs and liquids very quickly. Although it was put together for carp and only ever tested on carp prior to release, it has become my most successful barbel bait of all time. particularly with a matching paste wrap.                      | Again no synthetic artificial flavours that some carp get wary of. This one is nut based and the attractor system is basically the spices from a tai green Curry with a creamy coconut finish to smooth the taste.  | This has a subtle hint of fish meal but it remains very subtle. Most appear surprised to hear there is a slight fish content. One of our long term Quest Baits Team members Ron Key loves this bait and we struggle to get him to use anything else. It is always his first choice. | It contains no synthetic ingredients whatsoever. Everything is totally natural.   |
|   | This one will still smell and taste good even after being out for 48 hours. I have probably caught more carp using this as a hook bait than any other in the range, yet strangely enough I rarely use it as my main bait. | Again incredibly attractive to the carp in the coldest months. Ypu will never see me on the bank during the winter without a few of these with me. It isn't just a great cold water bait though, it was my main choice to take to Italy with me in the hottest conditions I have ever caught carp in. That session I landed them to just under 60 lb, so not a small fish bait either. | Made for use in combination with Chillied Hemp originally but has since gone on to become our biggest seller and the first bait I reach for when visiting places that possibly have not seen many boilies. The carp appear to accept it as a food source from day one. | For the first couple of years of quest baits, this was our biggest selling bait before rahja spice nudged it to one side but still remains a massive seller particularly with our mainland European customers and anglers travelling to France for some reason. As said above, this one is at its best in the warmer months. Barbel love it too. | Works well fished in conjunction with other baits to add a bit of colour to a baited area particularly with the Special Crab and the Questrami. Also useful for those little baiting traps in the margins enabling you to keep an eye on it. Orage has always been a classic carp catching colour, but few seem to use it these days. | Yellow pineapple baits tend to be the reach for 'get out of jail' bait with many U.K. anglers when the going gets tough. When the fish are showing at range, try one as a single hook bait and no freebies. You may be surprised.                            | Made from totally natural ingredients and a subtle blend of meat, seafood, fish and spices. Another bait that appears to sort out the larger fish. It was uncanny using it on the River trent. The average size of barbel it caught was massive with several customers having PB's almost straight away. | A soluble bait that gently oozes attraction. The nutty base mix and spicy coconut aroma is one the carp love and appear to keep coming back for time and time again. I have said many times that this is one of my favourite baits in the range. I really should start to use it again. | This has become a great bait fished in conjunction with other baits too. Magnum White and Chilli Chocolate fished 50/50 mhas become a classic these days.   | Made to attract the carp's natural food to the bait for even more attraction in the swim. The underwater critters such as caddis and snails love this, as do the carp of course. Since releasing it we have had some very favourable reports coming through from the tench and Bream anglers as well. |
